Online Library of Indian Languages: Marathi > AgniPankh by Apj Abdul Kalam is a science fantasy story about an 11-year old boy who lives with his grandfather on a farm, and one day discovers that the animals talk to him. The animals teach him about science and they help him learn to live in harmony with nature. The book tells the exciting adventures of the boy learning about plants, animals, science, earth's resources, energy conservation etc. It's a children's book but it is also a practical reference for adults to read and learn from. It explains how to take care of the nature and environment. The book was named as one of the best science fiction books for children by National Science Fiction Pedia. The book is also popular among adults who like to read on science, gardening, animals etc.

Dr. A. Naidu (English author): "I am extremely happy that AgniPankh has won first place in the first Annual International Book Fair on Children's Literature at New Delhi (India) on 23rd August 2010! I love this award very much since it is an international forum where I can share my work."

Dr. Sandhya Sharma (English author): "I am happy to announce that AgniPankh is listed in the top 30 books list in an international children's book fair held in Delhi. I am very pleased because this award will help in popularizing my work amongst children and adults alike. With a better understanding of scientific ideas, it is hoped that the readers will learn a lot from AgniPankh."

Hazel Grace Erskine-Lindo: "I have read the entire story which was excellent. It was really interesting and I could understand it well."

Aditi Bhattacharyya: "This book is very good for kids since it talks about science, environment and animals. But, it can also be used by adults to develop an interest in the same. It has stories about science like how fireflies glow in the dark and how plants can be helpful instead of harmful. It also teaches about animals like how bees help plants get attention and food."

Deepshikha Nagpal: "This book shows that humans are not above nature which is very good since it shows that we should respect nature instead of what people say that humans are more superior or better than animals. The story is really interesting."

Mahima Chaudhary: "The book was very interesting because I know nothing about science so it showed me how to develop interest in science. It was really interesting when the boy learned about creatures that are not found in his place. I liked it because there were many places that I wanted to go and see after reading the book."

Shruti Chaudhary: "This book is wonderful because it tells us how we can take care of animals and nature just like how the animals took care of him. It is very useful for children to learn how to live in harmony with each other and nature. The book was really interesting and it showed me a world which I never knew existed."

Anjali Makhija: "Agnipankh was an interesting story because it has everything which we don't know about."
